Two weeks after the victorious Italian GT Sprint opener at Vallelunga, Riccardo Agostini is set for the second round of the Endurance Series held this coming weekend (May 18/19) at the Misano Adriatico Circuit.

Third in the Pro-Am category at the most recent 3 Hours of Monza in the Antonelli Motorsport's Mercedes-AMG GT3 car, Agostini will share again the wheel with Alessio Rovera and Alexander Moiseev.

The Bronze Russian driver improved a lot and the German car showed well in the first seasonal rounds, with Agostini and Rovera completing a perfect combination, aiming to an encore and more points to climb-up the Endurance series standings, after dominating the Sprint's.

The two free practice session get underway on Friday at 11 and 17.14. Qualifying starts on Saturday at 13.45. The race will start on Sunday at 14.40, live streamed at <http://www.acisport.it/cigt>.
